LOUIS Bellerose

Louis Bellerose is a Métis survivor of the Grouard Residential School. Now, he speaks about his past experiences to educate others about the horrors of the residential school system. Louis considers himself a survivor, expressing gratitude for being alive and able to share his story. His efforts are crucial in raising awareness and fostering understanding of the impact of residential schools on Indigenous people and communities. Through his advocacy, he has become a beacon of hope for many, highlighting the importance of preserving Indigenous cultures and histories. Louis' work continues to inspire and mobilize communities toward meaningful reconciliation and justice.

"I want to tell my story for those who can no longer speak."

-Métis Nation of Alberta, 2023
